Today, we had a poetry workshop with poet and writer Amina Atiq.

She needed our help as all of her poems had been eaten by 'the bookworm'.

To save the poetry world, we had to write a class poem about the different super powers in class which make us special such as the way we look and our talents.

After a lot of brainstorming we came up with a poem that perfectly reflected us.

Have a read here:

Fire Breathing Dragons!

We have many powers,

Helping those around us, playfulness, forgiveness and kindness.

We look very different

Our hair is curly, long, short and straight,

Our skin is tanned, brown, white and black,

Our eyes are green, blue but mostly brown,

We're tall, short and in the middle.

You shouldn't do that, that's not right,

Especially when Amina was sleeping that night.

We're good, so we'll forgive you,

Go get something more productive to do.

We dragons are very unique,

Superheroes are never weak!
